Leibnitz, Österreich - In a shocking attack, a car in Leibnitz was shot at with a stone sling on Tuesday evening. Around 9:30 p.m., the 35-year-old driver heard a loud bang that drew her attention to the incident. A steel ball that had a diameter of five to seven millimeters had hit the vehicle's rear window, it broke and the ball got stuck in it. Fortunately, the woman was not injured, but immediately alerted the police after noticing the damage. The incident occurred in the city of Leibnitz, where the police immediately blocked the surrounding area and initiated a search.

At first glance, the perpetrator seemed unobtrusive. Despite intensive investigations by the police, the search has so far been unsuccessful. According to initial findings, it is assumed that the steel ball was shot down with a stone slingshot. This raises questions about security in the region, especially in view of the fact that such incidents are not common. The police emphasize the importance of testimony and calls on the population to work if they notice something.
